Increase Profitability Using Lean Principles – Learn how from Sierra College on August 5 with the Continuous Improvement Network

In one day, jump start your company’s Lean program by benefiting from proven principles that have been applied by northern California companies to cut costs, engage employees and increase productivity; sign up today for the August 5 training offered by Sierra College CACT and the Continuous Improvement Network.

ROCKLIN –Sierra College Center for Applied Competitive Technologies (CACT) (www.sierracollegegetraining.com) with the Continuous Improvement Network, will offer Lean Principles training from 8 am to 5 pm on August 5 for $190 per person. The training will be hosted by Rex Moore Electrical Contractors and Engineers, 6001 Outfall Circle, Sacramento. Register today by going to the Continuous Improvement Network website (<http://www.cacinetnetwork.com>).

This concise introduction to the Principles of Lean can get your company started on the Lean journey that has helped so many organizations to reduce costs, improve quality and increase productivity. Hands-on activities mixed with lecture give attendees a firsthand experience seeing the potential impact of Lean to save time and eliminate the waste of resources.

As an association of business leaders committed to learning and sharing successful workplace methods to enhance productivity, the Continuous Improvement Network has shared information and toured members’ facilities since 2011 to see best practices in process improvement.

The Sierra College CACT is funded through the Workforce and Economic Development program of the California Community College Chancellor’s Office. Since 1992, the Sierra College CACT has provided customized employee training for organizations, manufacturers and technology companies throughout Northern California.
